BOARD APPROVES CAR INSURANCE BID

At an adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Tuesday evening, the Council let the city's automobile liability insurance contract to A. J. Gaggero, an insurance agent residing in and who has an office in Daly City. The Council decided in favor of the local insurance agent, after much debating, as to the financial standing, by agents of the two competing companies.

The Pacific Telegraph & Telephone Company communicated with the Council, asking permission to blast rock in the trench they are now working on to lower their cables on Hillside boulevard, to meet the new existing grade in the widening of Mission street. The board granted permission, providing they carry proper insurance and providing the city attorney's opinions are carried out for the city's protection.

The Peninsula branch League of California Municipalities communicated with the board, informing of their next regular meeting, which will be held in San Leandro, and in which they promised a very interesting meeting for city officials to attend.

The board has requested, by resolution that was unanimously passed, that the California Public Works of Washington, D. C., continue the employment and the funds now made available for such employment for a period long enough to make it possible to complete C. W. A. projects the city is now making application for, and also to provide part time work for single men. The Clerk was instructed to forward a copy to the head of the California Work Administration of Washington, and also a copy be sent to United States Senators Hiram Johnson and William G. McAdoo and Congressman John J. McGrath, at Washington, D. C.

Another resolution passed by the board embraced a project to construct a building for Fire Department No. 6, in which application was made to the California Works Administration for approval and financial aid for material and labor necessary for the completion of said building. It was also resolved that if approval is received on above mentioned project that the City Council will provide the necessaary real estate suitable for the location of said firehouse.

The board adjourned until next Monday evening, which is a regular meeting night.

DRIVER OF BAYSHORE DEATH AUTO FINED

After deliberating six hours, a Redwood City jury found Patrick McGuire, of San Francisco, guilty of driving while drunk and acquitted him on two charges of manslaughter. He was fined $325. McGuire was driver of an automobile that crashed on the Bayshore highway, October 21, resulting in the death of two companions of McGuire, Miss Hazel Borovich and Mrs. Paloma Kick, both of San Francisco.

BIRTHDAY AND FOUNDERS' DAY AT CROCKER P. T. A.

The Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association celebrated their fifth birthday and Founders' Day, Tuesday evening, February 13, in the General Pershing school. The P. T. A. room was artistically decorated with spring blossoms and evergreens.

Mrs. J. J. Garland, president of the Seventeenth District, and Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, district chairman of Character Education, were guest speakers for the evening.

Mrs. Katch, Founders' Day chairman, was in charge of the following program:

Mrs. E. I. Bartlett opened the meeting with remarks as regards the spiritual training of children; the homecoming of the charter members and officers was recognized; Mrs. Jordan read a poem written by Miss Victoria Roussel in remembrance of the organization of Crocker P. T. A.; Mrs. Pauw sang two beautiful selections; the Boys' Glee Club of Crocker school gave their initial performance under the capable direction of Miss Mosconi.

A Founders' Day pageant was enacted by the past presidents, Mrs. Alexander, charter president, Mrs. Bolger, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Walker, Katherine Katch taking the part of the child.

Mr. Crane, superintendent of Daly City schools, and Mr. Augustien, chairman of Board of Trustees, made some very interesting remarks.

At the conclusion of the program the meeting was turned back to the president, Mrs. Walker, who closed the session. A social hour was then enjoyed.

HIGH SCHOOL P.T.A. HONOR FOUNDERS

Tuesday evening a large concourse of parents and friends attended the special Founders' Day program given by the local high school P. T. A. in the Little Theater of the building.

Following the general theme of the year, that of interpreting the school to the public, the English department was in charge. Miss Torello's group presented a scene from Julius Ceaesar. Those taking part were Eva Trautman, Rita Sadler, Olga Curusis, Mary McLean, Ethel Miller and Frances Welsh.

An experiment in the verse reading choir was given by advanced students from Miss Staib's classes. The participants were Berta Ford, Norma Conti, Alma Harper, Anita Mooney, Jeanne Ewing, Walter Fati, Richard Spencer, Wesley Fulton and Robert Smith.

The public speaking class gave a directed conversation on the general topic of "The Stage." Jean Benner, Esther Franklin, Norma Conti and Paul McKellup were responsible for this feature.

Mrs. J. J. Garland, president of the Seventeenth District, Congress of Parents and Teachers, gave a reading on Abraham Lincoln.

Vocal numbers, including "I Love You Truly," "Smilin' Through" and "Birth of Dawn" were rendered by Mrs. R. L. Gray.

"The Oracle Speaks," a pageant directed by Mrs. Stella Jensen, closed the evening's program in a most fitting manner. Students taking part in the pageant were Alecia Fields, Eleanor Hutchings, Mary Jorgenson, Doris Robertson, Louise Rushing and Ella Zimmerman. Mrs. Bertha Songer was the accompanist.

AMERICAN LEGION VALENTINE PARTY

The members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, held an enjoyable party in Legion Hall, Wednesday, February 14, with the ladies of the Auxiliary as invited guests. Among the distinguished guests were Mayor H. H. Smith, June Craft, president of Daly City Unit No. 410, Catherine Foreman, first vice-president of the Eighth District of the American Legion Auxiliary, and M. C. Forbes, president of the Veterans' Farm and Home Association.

The main event of the evening was the annual radio initiation of the Department of California over radio station KFRC. Mayor Smith gave an interesting talk, complimenting the Post on its growth and community service since it was organized. Comrade M. C. Forbes outlined the program of the Veterans' Farm and Home Association in regards to veteran homes.

Comrade Bon Omi donated the Valentines which were given to all present. Refreshments, furnished by Comrade Dannenberg and the social committee, were served after the meeting. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to the excellent accordion music played by the 12-year-old son of Comrade Simoncini, and various radio dance orchestras. Daly City Post No. 410 wishes to thank the Byrne Radio Co. for their courtesy and co-operation in furnishing the radio that was used for the initiation and dancing.

Tonight, Friday, February 23, will be the "open house" night and the Captains meeting in Legion Hall.

Don't forget the next regular meeting, Wednesday, February 28, will be a joint meeting with Ocean View Post No. 494.

The Eighth District is among the 100 per cent class, having made 105 per cent of the February 15 quota. Keep those membership cards coming in and hold that place. L. M. H.

GIRL DISAPPEARS FROM HOME

Eva Marie Walzberg, 14-year-old daughter of M. Walzberg, state highway patrolman, residing at 561 Madison street, Redwood City, has been missing from her home since last Monday night about 9 o'clock. When last seen she was wearing a blue skirt, white middy, no hat. She has brown hair, which she wears in a boyish bob, and is rather large for her age.

Locates Stolen Bicycle

Joseph Scontrino, of Winchester street, reported to the local police department that some unknown person had stolen his bicycle while he was selling papers in the vicinity of Mission and Oliver streets last Saturday night. Last Monday the bicycle was returned to Joe by Chief of Police John T. Doyle, who located it at a home on Chattanooga street in San Francisco.

HOPE GROWS STEADILY FOR LOW TAKE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Expressions of the views of enlightened parties during the recent flurry in the Texas Legislature in consideration of an increase in the pari mutuel commission to a high figure has been instructive in the extreme. The situation down in the Lone Star commonwealth likewise furnished a warning to all sportsmen in states having horse race wagering statutes to be ever on the alert against such movements as that in the South.

As I said last week, the modern tendency is altogether for a reasonably low "take" in the betting pools. Any proposal seeking to expand governmental revenue through too steep taxation of race track speculation is only defeating its own end. Instead of getting more revenue the state will not get any at all.

Men at the helm of the sport in Texas came out with the bold declaration that the suggested tax would kill racing in the state. The plants could not operate as the fans would not bet their money for any length of time with a deduction of twenty per cent.

I have confidence in the vision and far-sightedness of the members of the California Legislature, and am certain there will be no such incident in the session next January at Sacramento as there was at the Texas capital. In fact, I trust there will be a move in exactly the opposite direction. The "take" of twelve per cent now legal in this state should be cut to nine per cent, a change approved by broad-minded race folk.

TANFORAN RACES TO BEGIN MARCH 29

Perparation for one of the finest horse racing meets ever held in its history is being completed for Tanforan, where the Spring meeting will open March 29 under the auspices of the Tanforan Company, Ltd. The California Horse Racing Board has granted a permit for the meeting, and has accepted a program of changes submitted by John W. Marchbank, prominent San Mateo county sportman and principal owner of the track.

Marchbank personally will manage the Spring meeting, which will open Thursday, March 29; closes the next day, Good Friday; re-opening Saturday and continuing five days a week for thirty days, with the option of an extension if mutually agreed upon by Marchbank and the racing board. In assuming active management, Marchbank brings to Tanforan his long experience with horses, and has been assured of the support of the most prominent racing stables.

An innovation at the track for the Spring meeting will be a new ticket selling machine, which, after the coin is deposited, issues the mutuel ticket, registers the amount wagered, figures the percentage and deducts the commission.

These machines will supply accurate information to those buying mutuels. In addition the management plans a large board where the machine figures, showing the odds on each horse, will be displayed. The new machine has the endorsements of the Kentucky Racing Commission and the California board.

Readjustment of purses at the track was allowed by the racing officials, but Mr. Marchbank has announced he will offer larger purses than the minimum fixed by the commission, to attract the better stables to Tanforan. The new manager will make numerous changes in the operation of the tracks, designed to improve racing conditions and attract large Eastern stables to Pacific turfdom.

The Tanforan operator announced he is working to make California one of the greatest horse breeding and racing centers in the world.

Valentine Dance at Hansen Home

Miss Claire Hansen was hostess at a Valentine dance given at her home on Acton street, Saturday, February 17. Among the guests were Messrs. and Mesdames William Irwin and and Milton Evans, Misses Betty Thomson, Ellie Lee, Rita Vidal, Ethel Gunn, Dolly Hutley, Eva Berry, Shirley Thoreson, Margaret and Josephine Campbell, of San Mateo, Bernice Fick, of Berkeley, and Ann Mae Morrison of Fairfax; Messrs. Gene Myers, Elmer White, Andrew Buchman, Robert Thomson, Chester Armstrong, San Kennedy, Emanuel Wooton, Arthur Nelson, Jack Hart, Winstead Smith, of San Mateo, Anthony Scovon, of Fairfax, William Tood, of Oakland, and Walter Rice, of Kentfield.

Fined for Reckless Driving

Carl Koch, of Hanover street, left last Tuesday for Redwood City, where he is to serve a five day sentence given him in Judge Ellis C. Johnson's court last Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock, on a charge of reckless driving.

VETERANS CAUTION LOCAL MERCHANTS

Among the many important gatherings of the veterans in this community during the past week was the regular monthly meeting of the United Veterans Council of San Mateo county, held in the Legion Hall, San Bruno, on Friday night, February 16. This organization is composed of all the veteran organizations and the unorganized veterans for the purpose of working out problems of veteran and civic affairs.

One of the most important points discussed at this meeting was ways and means to eliminate the mulcting and false impressions upon the merchants of our county by so-called veteran approved activities. There has been, for several years, the sale of cards, novelties and other insignia, advertised as sponsored by the veteran. We wish to advise the merchant and citizen of our locality that there are only three campaigns which receive the official sanction of the major veteran organizations. They are the annual "Buddy Poppy," sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the "Poppy Sale," sponsored by the American Legion, and the "Forget Me Not" sale, sponsored by the Disabled Veterans of the World war.

Should any other organization have sales for a legitimate purpose, we will be glad to assist them, but to the knowledge of the writer, these are the only ones which should be patronized. It will be well to remember, every cent spent for the above mentioned drives is for relief work in our own locality ,and the money stays right here. Those representing themselves as selling cards, flowers, and what not, are more or less promoters, and the money is taken out of the district.

We will advise you, through these columns, of the dates of the sponsored sales, and any one representing themselves to be veterans, making sales during the off season, can be traced through either of the two organizations maintaining Posts in Daly City, and I know that we will be glad to co-operate to eliminate this practice.

Old Glory Post will hold their regular meeting in Eagles Hall on Friday night, February 23. This being the official visit of the Department Auxiliary President, Mrs. Neron, the Auxiliary will meet in the Post hall this night.

Watch the papers for the announcement of the annual Buddy Poppy Sale. It will be here soon.

LOCAL EAGLES ENJOY ANNIVERSARY DINNER

On Saturday, February 10, Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of Daly City, held a banquet celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. More than 150 members attended, also representatives from San Franicsco and San Mateo county Aeries.

Otto Schramm, chairman, assisted by the other members of the committee, put on a wonderful dinner and show. Arthur J. Bodien, as master of ceremonies, kept all interested with many surprises.

Many twenty year veteran pins were given to members in honor of their twenty year membership. All who attended this affair will remember it for years to come.

MINERS ALARMED AT PROPOSED CUT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Again I find substantiation of the proposition I have been setting forth for some months in this column, my notion being that mining should be accorded as much attention by the Federal Government as any other industry when it comes to financial assistance. The miner, of all men, should not be passed by, when it is fully realized that he needs just a bit of a lift.

Glancing over the ever readable The Alaska Weekly, I note in a resolution adopted by the West Coast Mineral Association the following language:

"Mining as a basic industry is entitled to proportionate support with agriculture and banking. It would be a crime to, in any way, curtail the activities of the Government in assisting, with experiment and advice, this great industry."

The immediate matter in hand was a threatened curtailment of the appropriation necessary to carry on the work of the United States Bureau of Mines and of the Northwest Experiment Station in the Mines Laboratory at the University of Washington.

It has been recognized by up-and-coming mining men for some time that the Northwest Experiment Station has been doing important work in connection with the development of the mineral resources of Western States and Alaska. The Bureau of Mines is one of the most useful scientific bodies anywhere and any cutting down of its financial support would be little short of a calamity.

Interest in silver in increasing perceptibly and in some well-informed quarters action at Washington that would be immensely pleasing to miners of the white metal is expected before long. Experts are basing their predictions on activity similar to that preceding the revaluation of gold. Under the Key Pittman amendment to the Gold Revaluation Act the discretionary power of silver revaluation was placed in President Roosevelt's hands.

Even though remonetization may not come, the weight of the silver dollar may be cut to quite an extent, perhaps forty per cent. It is estimated the silver producer, under such a ruling, would get $1.17 an ounce instead of the present 64½ cents.

It is undoubtedly recalled that under that London Conference agreement the United States is bound to buy at least 24,000,000 ounces of domestic silver each year for four years. Right now, following the necessary proclamation, the Federal Government is purchasing the metal, retaining half in bullion as seigniorage and minting the other half for delivery to producers in the shape of dollars.

Directors of the Haida Gold Mines have closed a deal with New York financiers for funds to develop the free gold property at Kootenay Harbor on the west coast of Moresby Island in the Queen Charlottes. The directors are residents of Vancouver and Victoria, British Columbia.

Newspapermen of Vancouver have been marveling at large specimens taken from veins cut recently at the Cariboo Gold Quartz Mines. Spectacular free gold and telluride specimens were shown, along with several pieces of quartz sulphide ore.

Lode gold production in the northern part of British Columbia is due for a boom, according to latest word. There are large placer producing sections in that half of the province but the field is almost virgin, as far as lode gold is concerned.

COUNTY EXPENDITURES FOR PAST SIX MONTHS

The first report of county governmental expenditures under the new charter was issued by County Auditor Stack last Tuesday. It includes the six months ending January 1, 1934, and reveals that several departments under the charter will be short of funds before the end of the fiscal year, June 30, unless they are careful.

Cost of grand jury investigation is far greater than the amount figured in the 1933-34 budget, it developed. Mileage fees last year were $1,376.80. For the first six months of the current fiscal year, this expense totaled $2,216.15. The appropriation for the entire year, based on last year's figures, is $1,500. Hiring of experts to advise the jury last year was $550. Costs for the six months, according to the report, totaled $800.

A total of $1,181 was spent during 1932-33 for relief of the county's unemployed.

JEFFERSON HIGH LINCOLN ESSAYS

The following essays were read in the Lincoln contest at Jefferson Union high school on the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday and received honorable mention by the judges. The essays are of such merit that the Record takes pleasure in publishing them in full:

Lincoln, the Liberator and Martyr

(By STEVE PARODI.)

While Washington stands as the hero of the Revolution, and the first to establish our government, Lincoln stands as the hero of the mightier struggle by which our Union was saved. Abraham Lincoln was born in 1809, and was the son of poverty-stricken parents. His father was one of those men who were found on the frontier in the early days of the Western movement, always changing from one place to another, and dropping a little lower at each move.

Because of this, Abe's early days were of ignorance and poverty and hard work. Out of such surroundings he slowly and painfully lifted himself. He gave himself an education, he took part in an Indian war, he worked in the fields, he kept a country store, he read and studied, and at last he became a lawyer. Then he entered into the rough politics of the newly settled state. He grew to be a leader of his county and was elected to the legislature. The road was rough and the struggle bitter, but the movement was always upward.

When he challenged Douglas to a series of debates on slavery, Fate opened a door which led to Lincoln's becoming one of the most famous men in the history of the United States. These debates made Lincoln so well known to his northern followers that in 1860 he was nominated as the Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States. The Democratic party was divided at that time, and had two candidates, Douglas and Breckenridge. This division resulted in Lincoln's victory, and he became our sixteenth president.

By this time some of the Southern states seceded from the Union and set up a government called the "Confederate States of America." They had their government all in running order before Lincoln left Springfield for the White House.

In February, 1861, Lincoln said good-bye to the people of Springfield and left for Washington to take his seat as president. Never did a public man nor a great popular leader face such a terrible situation. The Union was breaking up, more Southern states were seceding, and the government was going bankrupt. The people knew that Lincoln was a great man, but how great his ability to deal with the awful conditions no one knew. It may be said, however, that no greater, no more difficult, no more unpleasant task has ever been faced by any man in modern times, and no one has ever met a fierce trial and conflict more successfully.

Lincoln, at the White House, made it clear in his inaugural address, to which thousands listened with the greatest interest, that he meant to fight, if fighting were necessary to save the Union. He put the question of preserving the Union to the front, and let the slavery question drop for a while.

After the Confederates fired upon Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor, South Carolina, Lincoln sent the call for 75,000 men. War had come—

SEEKING CROSSING SAFETY MEASURE

Representatives of the Peninsula Grade Crossing Conference appeared before the San Mateo county board of supervisors, meeting last Monday in Redwood City, to press their plea that traffic stop signs be erected at all railroad crossings in the county. The delegation claimed that the loss of life at grade crossings could be materially reduced by such safety signs.

And another angle cited to the board was that if such signs were erected and motorists who ignored them prosecuted, the public soon would become educated to stop before crossing all railroad grades.

The board took the appeal under advisement and informed the delegation it would give serious consideration to the request.

The board of supervisors last Monday for the first time met in its new room, which formerly was the district attorney's reception room.

Several C. W. A. projects were approved by the board.

DALY CITY NOTES

Mr. Harding, of Peoria street, motored to Sacramento last Saturday and spent the week end on business in that city.

Mrs. Annie Snee, of Collingwood Way, visited with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Eason, of Hanover street, last Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Miller and family, of Hanover street, spent last Sunday with Mr. Miller's brother and his family in Oakland.

A marriage license was issued in San Francisco last week to Harold S. Johnson, 28, Daly City, and Bertha L. Willet, 23, 156 Seville street.

Mrs. M. Woodside, of Cavour street, was among the members of the General Pershing P. T. A. who attended the Seventeenth District Founders' Day program in Burlingame last Friday.

The members of the nominating committee of the General Pershing P. T. A. met in the P. T. A. room of the school last Monday afternoon. Chairman Mrs. Ed Byrne called the meeting. The other members of the committtee are Mesdames Boyle, Mapes, Ireton and Frazier.

A very successful card party was held at the home of Mrs. Louise Eliasen, president of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, N. D. G. W., on Tuesday afternoon, February 15. The affair was attended by several members of the Parlor and their friends. After the game, dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. J. E. Walker, Mrs. Orvilla Pauw, Mrs. John Caine and Mrs. Rose Abbott motored to Burlingame, Friday, February 16, to attend the Seventeenth District meeting held in the Burlingame high school, it being the occasion of National Founders' Day celebration, also the homecoming of district officers and charter members.

Mrs. Carry Norry, of Oliver street, was hostess at a whist game in her home Wednesday evening of last week. A dainty supper was enjoyed by the following guests: Mrs. D. Warren and her daughter, Miss Marguerite Warren, Mr. and Mrs. M. McKinney, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Norry, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zgraggen, Mr. and Mrs. Al Drago and Miss Emma Drago.

Final arrangements have been made for the annual dinner to be held in honor of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the organizing of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, N. D. G. W. Many of the members and their friends have signified their intention to attend the affair, which will be held next Tuesday evening, February 27. Mrs. Florence Hopman will be in charge of the dinner.

Oppose Garbage Dumping

The San Mateo city council is on record as opposing the dumping of San Francisco garbage in San Mateo county. A resolution protesting the dumping was adopted at last Monday night's council meeting on motion of Councilman Justin Fitzgerald.

OLD GLORY AUXILIARY NOTES OF INTEREST

Wednesday night a party of members of Old Glory Post and Auxiliary motored to San Bruno to be present at the meetings of Tanforan Post and Auxiliary, who are now having their meeting on the same evening in the Legion hall. A brief business meeting was held, after which the Tanforan Auxiliary entertained their Post and visitors by presenting a snappy playlet, the talent being the ladies of their Auxiliary. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to the music of a local boys' orchestra. Refreshments were served a la V. F. W., and everyone parted with a happy "Good Night," to meet again soon.

The national radio "Hello America" hour was celebrated by the various peninsula Posts and Auxiliaries in San Mate, Thursday night, as the guests at Matalan Post. A class of some thirty-five recruits were obligated over the ether waves from Washington, D. C., by National Commander Van Zandt, with the assistance of Old Glory's crack degree team, who put on the work in their usual fine manner.

On Tuesday evening several ladies of the Auxiliary were guests at the banquet given in honor of Department President Phoebe Neron in the War Memorial Building in San Francisco. Those who attended were President Elsie Ireton, Helen Erwin, Lela Lyons and Ethel Dorn. Following the dinner, the six Francisco Auxiliaries combined and performed the ritualist work for the approval of Department President. E. D.

WOODROW WILSON-VISTA GRANDE PARENT-TEACHERS

The Woodrow Wilson - Vista Grande P. T. A. held its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon, February 20. The membership is steadily increasing. A very interesting report was given on the district Founders' Day celebration.

We held our Founders' Day and Fathers' Nite on Tuesday evening. The following program was given: Salute to the Flag; Song, America; P. T. A. Song; Song, Sleepy Hollow Time, by Girls' Glee Club; Talk, Present Day Trends in School Finance, by R. L. Crane, District Superintendent; Song, King's Serenade, Girls' Glee Club; Talk, Department Work, D. W. Mathews, Principal; Song, Kentucky Babe, Girls' Glee Club; Candle Lighting Ceremony. The candles were lit for national P. T. A., Mrs. Maude Hanselman; State P. T. A., Mrs. Anna Legge; District P. T. A., Mrs. M. Woodside; Unit P. T. A., Mrs. Eva Page; Children, Gene Hanselman.

This unit was organized in February, 1922, and has rendered much service to the community and in the schools.

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. are sponsoring the bond election for new schools to be held soon. Mr. Chesney spoke on the "Fire Hazards" in our schools. Mr. George Augustien spoke on the school housing problems as faced in our community. At present there are three buildings which are very dangerous fire traps and our children must go there every day. We as parents owe it to our children to protect them while they are learning to become our future citizens.

The sewing club will meet next Tuesday afternoon, February 27. All members are invited to come and help. The next regular meeting will be held on Tuesday, March 20.

The District Convention will be held on April 19 to 20 in Burlingame high school. G. J. H.

County Board to Mark Cars

All county owned cars, except those operated by the sheriff, are to bear the county insignia, the San Mateo county board of supervisors ruled last Tuesday, following a request from R. P. Schwerin, of San Mateo, that official cars be so marked. County Executive Walter T. Kellogg was instructed to have the cars marked.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

W. O. Paisley, editor of the Marion, Illinois, Daily Republican, says:

"Did you ever stop to think that the battle which the newspapers have been putting up to see that a 'free press' guarantee was included in their N. R. A. code was not a selfish fight, but in the interests of the people as a whole? General Johnston said it was not necessary as the papers would have the right of appeal, but they knew, as he should have known, that the business of a newspaper and that of any person or business it was trying to protect would be ruined during the long delays of an appeal.

"'Free press' and 'free speech' must be safeguarded and the newspapers, through their associations, have been fighting for the interests of every citizen when they have contended that the 'free press' clause must be in the newspaper code."

Genealogy, if pursued too far, might discover an ancestor swinging from the family tree by his neck—or his tail.

When a Buffalo man had his eye injured the surgeon gave rather doubtful consolation by saying that it would come out all right.

SIDELIGHTS

Hoarded gold is "illegal tender," as an Oklahoma City woman found out when she tendered a $5 gold piece to Joe McCuen, county clerk, in payment of a fine for a traffic violation. Joe said: "Sorry, madam, I can't accept it; maybe it will be worth something some day." So she gave him a $5 bill instead.

We don't exactly know whether it's news when a baby bites a woman, but in the case of Eve Butterworth, 3-year-old New Orleans baby, who bit her negro nurse on the arm, it was costly to her parents. Addie Johnson, the nurse, was awarded $1,000 damages by the Court of Appeals after a lower court had refused to give her a judgment.

It is said that one can not get blood out of a turnip, but it appears there is blood in a potato. In any event, in an account of the development of the Katahdin, a new potato said to be almost perfect, government scientists relate that expeditions were sent to the original home of the tuber in Central and South America to obtain new potato "blood lines."

A new version of the origin of the term "honeymoon" is given by Harold M. Krebs, Califorina bee expert. He declares that it was an old Babylonian custom to spread honey on the bricks above the door of a newly married couple, and that the aroma was supposed to cling to the house during the twenty-eight days of the moon's complete revolution, or a lunar month. Therefore, we assume, the honeymoon should last twenty-eight days.

Mrs. Harold I. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who is serving her third term as a Republican member of the Illinois general assembly, has announced that she will not be a candidate for re-election. Mr. Ickes was formerly a Republican, and took an important part in the Hughes campaign in 1916, after being prominently identified with the Progressive party of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912. He is one of the three former Republicans appointed to cabinet posts by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the other two being Woodin and Wallace.

The only instance in which a husband and wife are both former members of Congress is that of Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Sims, of New Mexico. Mrs. Sims is former Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, of Illinois. They were married a few months after her defeat for the Senate. When they visited the national capitol recently, both were granted the "courtesy of the floor" of the House, a privilege granted to ex-members.

A brother and sister, Juan and Marina de Cruz, natives of the Philippines, are described as the world's smallest adult human beings. Juan is 28 inches tall, his sister only 25. They speak English fluently, are expert dancers, and Juan smokes big, black cigars. Seeing this tiny pair might convince one that there is an Island of Lilliput, after all.

George Washington, of Cleveland, Ohio, lived up to the traditional veracity of his illustrious namesake when arraigned in court, saying, "I had a knife, was drunk, and scratched the guy up a little." The judge said: "For being truthful when there is no evidence against you, I will fine you only $10."

A Wisconsin lady, Mrs. Lillian M. Shetsby, set a unique record by reducing forty-four pounds and getting paid for it. Declaring that she had lost that much weight through worrying over the alienation of her husband's affections by Mrs. Stella E. Myers, the jury awarded her $2,500 in damages—or about $56 a pound.

Rev. Billy Sunday, famed 70-year-old evangelist, who was once a professional baseball player, has been holding a revival in New York, with sermons puctuated with pungent saying in his old-time manner. Speaking of world conditions, he said: "Every nation reaches a crisis; you can't hand God the hot end of a poker." Another assertion was: "I have got just as much ginger and tobasco sauce for God as ever."

Human nature being what it is, it was inevitable that there would be a lot of graft in connection with the billions which are being spent by the government for employment relief and other recovery measures. Heads of the P. W. A. and C. W. A. are trying to find means of checking the widespread racketeering that has been reported. President Roosevelt recently stated that he was receiving between 200 and 300 letters a day complaining against irregularities and political manipulations in the C. W. A.

Local Boy Accidentally Shot

Roderick Dawe, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dawe, of 64 Woodrow street, was shot in the left hand and on the side of his head last Monday evening while playing in the park. Some unknown hit him while shooting with a B. B. gun. The injured youngster was taken care of in his home. The injuries were not serious.

LA HONDA BANDIT BUILT STORE

The old La Honda Store, 17 miles from Redwood City, may claim your attention when you learn that it is the "Bandit-Built Store." Here came theh Younger brothers, Jim and Bob, in the days after the Civil war, and following their various escapades in the Middle West. Here they worked for John Sears in building the store you see today. Their sudden departure followed the arrival of a messenger from the James boys, saying they were needed on a "return engagement" having to do with a bank at Northfield, Minnesota. Their next stop was in the Stillwater penitentiary. Old-timers at La Honda can give you details of their sojourn.

Here, too, is the La Honda Grove of redwoods, interesting because they have "fought a good fight," for all around are the charred or moss-grown stumps of redwood giants which fell before the onslaught of man.

CALIFORNIA SCHOOLS

By Roy W. Cloud, State Executive Secretary California Teachers' Association.

The Junior Colleges and High Schools

As early as 1907 the California legislature recognized the need for provisions to care for high school graduates who were unable to attend the state university or a state normal school. Attendance at the state university was barred to many students who were not only deserving, but of high mental caliber. In many instances economic difficulties stood in the way of such students.

As a result, the legislature in 1907 authorized the establishment of post-graduate classes in high schools. In 1917, the legislature authorized the establishment of Junior college courses in high schools. In 1921 the legislature enacted a law providing for the establishment of Junior college districts.

The Junior college course of study is about equal to the course of study for the first two years at the state university.

Thus the Junior college student whose work is on a sufficiently high level can transfer at the end of two years to the state university or to a state teachers' college, and complete the regular college course in two additional years. In this way the first two years of college education have been "brought to the people," and the opportunity for advanced education has been made available to thousands of young men and women who otherwise would find it impossible to continue their education beyond the high school level.

Many of these same young men and women transfer at the end of two years to the state university or other higher institutions.

However, the main purpose of the Junior college is to provide a "terminal" school for the great majority of its students. Junior college education should include many phases of technical training too advanced for high school students.

The Junior college is a special opportunity for many young men and women to get technical occupational traning for their life work. In the same way, it is a special opportunity for young men and women to increase their fitness for useful, happy, and wholesome lives.

In accordance with the best educational thought, as well as legally, the Junior college is part of the state secondary school system rather than a part of "higher education."

There is now a total of sixteen Junior college districts with thirty-five Junior colleges and an enrollment of 25,493, for 1931-32.

Completing the units of the secondary educational system of California—the Junior high school, the high school, and the Junior college—the Junior high school has as its primary aim bridging the gap between the old type of elementary school and the highly departmentalized modern high school.

The first Junior high school in the United States was established by F. F. Bunker at Berkeley in 1909. With the ending of the decade of 1930, 48 per cent of all California seventh and eighth grade pupils of the public schools were enrolled in Junior high schools.

Junior high school enrollment is steadily on the upcurve, with a total enrollment for 1931-32, the last available official figures, of 150,309.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note—This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importance for health protection, and a list of contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

Influenza a Destroyer

Although influenza is never thought of as a children's disease, we were shocked to discover that it killed 1,165 California children in the years 1928-1932—more than any other disease except tuberculosis. Since influenza often acts as a forerunner of tuberculosis in children and adults, the problem of the control of influenza becomes doubly important.

The reporting of influenza is far from complete, yet in many years it is our most prevalent disease. If we include all severe "colds" which confine people to bed for a day or more with fever, influenza is much more common than any other disease, and couses the greatest loss of time from work. It is impossible to differentiate a single feverish cold from influenza, but several cases in one family within a few days should always be reported as influenza. Prostration or weakness out of proportion to the height of fever or the severity of other symptoms is one of the most characteristic features of influenza. The incubation period, or time between effective exposure and development of illness, is one to four days, usually two to three. Four distinct types of infuenza are described by our best authorities: respiratory (cold, cough); nervous; gastro-intestinal; febrile ("fever may be the only manifestation of the disease.")

Any of the above types of the disease may be contracted from contact with any other type, although there seems to be a tendency for one type to reproduce itself.

Known and Unknown Factors

There is no other disease known which attacks so many people over so wide an area in so short a time. It is transmitted only by human contact, regardless of climate, wind or weather. While it spreads with amazing rapidity, it does not travel except where humans travel. The factors which cause influenza epidemics are unknown. Intensive investigations into common colds and influenza have been in progress all over the world since 1919, yet we know practically no more about this disastrous disease than Osler told us thirty years ago.

Next week we will tell the things to do and not to do to prevent the spread and complications of influenza.

DIRECTORS SELECTED FOR BANK OF AMERICA

Twenty-five directors of Bank of America N. T. & S. A., and thirty-four directors of its affiliated state institution, Bank of America (California), were elected at the annual meetings of the two Giannini banks in San Francisco on February 13.

All officers of both banks were re-elected by the directors. The executive officers include A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board; Leon Bocqueraz and Arthur Reynolds, vice-chairmen of the board; Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the general executive committee; Will F. Morrish, president; L. M. Giannini, senior vice-president; and W. E. Blauer, chairman of the general finance committee.

Membership of the board of Bank of America N. T. & S. A. was reduced to twenty-five from fifty, in conformity with the provisions of the National Banking Act of 1933. The twenty-five directors who retired from the board of the national bank remained directors of the state bank; seven directors elected to serve on the board of the national bank were also elected directors of the state bank, and two new directors were added to the board of Bank of America (California).

Lightning Rods Now Guard Building Hit Three Times

Installation of a modern lightning rod system on the new forty-eight-story General Electric office building in New York City has just been completed. Nearly 1,000 feet high, this structure will be struck by lightning frequently, but there will be no danger to either the building or the occupants. The system will conduct all bolts harmlessly to earth. The building was struck and damaged three times before the rods were installed.

Hats That Go Definitely Off-Face

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HATS off-the-face is latest millinery news. It would seem that the five fetching spring chapeaux in the illustration could not pose farther back on the head if they tried and stay on properly. However, that is the way of the newest brims—to describe a sort of halo about the head which gives us something refreshingly different from the types which have been in fashion for many seasons past.

We are inclined to believe that a conspiracy must have been going on between milliner and hairdresser to have brought about such perfect harmony between hat and hair. We will admit that this new silhouette, at first glance, seems designed for youth and youth only, but by way of encouragement to those who hesitate we're telling you that the off-the-face hairdress and the brim which reveals an expansive forehead are more flattering to those beyond debutante years than one might suppose. Then, too, as the new models continue to join in the style parade it is noted that milliners are introducing little softening touches in the way of front bandeaux and other devices which are guaranteed to flatter.

Nor is it fair to conclude that a soft arrangement of hair about the face is utterly taboo. On the contrary fashion is that fickle you are told in one breath to brush back your hair so as to show a placid brow and the next instant it's rumors of "bangs" which reaches our astonished ears. The first picture in this group unmistakably carries the message of bangs. The little off-the-face hat is a Talbot triumph done in taffeta with a big bow of spotted ribbon.

The talk of town for spring is the Breton sailor. Well, here you see it to the right at the top in the picture. It is made of black toya. The thing that is outstanding about the stripes for facing and scarf is that they are in the now-the-rage Mexican colors, for fashion has gone gaily Mexican this season. Your new suit blouse should be of Mexican striped silk or at least you should wear with your spring navy or black crepe frock a set of bizarre Mexican-striped costume jewelry. Just a word more about the popular Breton sailor, it need not be as severe in lines as you may conjecture, for milliners are giving all sorts of softening effects.

Perhaps no type of hat is more important this season than is the tiara turban. You will recognize at once that the model centered in the picture is one such. It is fashioned of matelasse straw with a row of buttons accenting the tiara motif.

No matter how staunch you have been in favor of snug close-fitting hats, you are going to find yourself talking, thinking and wearing brims this spring and summer. Which really will not be such a sacrifice after all, for the new brimmed models are that good looking and smartly tuned to occasion, it is said they will even be worn with suits as well as lighter frocks. The model below to the right in the group lends itself admirably to this thought for it carries a tailored feeling. In this Reboux "Desperado" we see a dashing example of the new side roll which is being strongly advocated.

Last but not least we show you a Reboux halo hat. It is of leghorn, has a bound edge and illustrates the fondness for bows as an underbrim treatment.

In conclusion hear this exciting news about flowers. Entire brims are being faced with them. The newsiest news of all is that flower trimmings are making their appearance on felt shapes.

SHE TALKED IN HER SLEEP

By COSMO HAMILTON

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

PALLION caught his breath. The crucial words of the telephone message were—"Hospital, Bar Harbor. . . . Come at once. your wife. . ."

A quiet even voice. "Yes. Your wife has been brought in. A motor accident. Insensible at present—concussion of the brain. We telephoned at once. Her name was on her bag and I knew that you were at Northeast Harbor because I saw you there. I regret to say that Mr. Cardonald is in a very critical state."

A cloud of white dust followed Pallion down the road. "Hospital—come at once—your wife . . ." In the incessant reiteration of these six ghastly words Cardonald found no place. Cardonald . . . critical state? Why drag that in? What earthly connection was there between Judy and this man? For the whole of that month he had been, it was true, at the bathing pool every day, but it was noticed that he had behaved himself very well for once. He had made no dead set at any particular girl but had spread his undoubted charm and pleasantry out thin.

To the dinners at his cottage every one had gone, and although he had danced many times with Judy many of the other girls had been his partners too. It was true that Judy had selected him as the butt for her chaff and made use of him as the carrier of her things. Wherever she went there was always such a man who was only too glad to be appointed to the job. With a frank acceptance of beauty which she acknowledged as a somewhat doubtful joy—it carried obligations and requirements which were often a bore—it amused her on dull days or after exercise to play the classic part. With it went, of course, the usual small rewards—the lingering hand-clasp, the sudden tender look, all merely traditional with the beauty role. Several times during his year of marriage Tom had seen these things. They had been openly performed and jokingly discussed. Honesty was Judy's middle name.

Imagination having preceded the hard-pushed car Tom parked it a little distance from the building, into which he rushed. He was shown into a room about which he moved in zigzags in order that he might dodge the figure of fear. He was no moral coward, but the girl upstairs was the wife with whom he considered himself to be still on his honeymoon. What was a year in a rapidly passing life?

The doctor held out his hand. "She's still unconscious," he said. "But I've known cases of concussion where unconsciousness has run into several days and sometimes longer than that. There are no limbs broken and I can find no signs of internal injury—a miracle to me!"

"Is there any . . ."

"Hope? Yes, yes, of course. She's young and in splendid condition. We must take great care, that's all."

The doctor's face was a blur. It was as though Tom saw it through a window wet with rain.

"But of course we must keep her, until definite convalescence, absolutely ignorant, somehow, of the tragic end of her . . friend."

"What friend?"

"Cardonald. He's dead."

In the tidal wave of reaction from the terror of Judy's death, Cardonald's made only a dent in Tom's mind. Thank God for that good word hope. "When can I see her?" he asked. "How long will she be here? Will she be marked, do you think? . . . Cardonald dead? I'm sorry. But I don't quite see. . . . I mean, did my wife collide with his car or did he smash up hers?"

The doctor cleared his throat. "Sooner or later you must know the facts," he said, "and as usual it falls to me to disclose unpleasant things."

"Unpleasant?"

"I was careful to use no stronger word than that."

"I don't understand," said Tom.

"Your wife and Cardonald were in the same car, sir. I can tell you precisely what happened because I have it from the man who brought them in. He saw your wife and Cardonald leave his yacht together, with luggage; land, enter the car and with Cardonald driving turn up into the road."

"Coming off the yacht?" But Judy had said that she was going into Bar Harbor to dine and sleep at her aunt's. "Oh, I see. Mrs. Miller was on the yacht . . ."

"No. They were alone. As they were turning the corner a wildly driven car passed a touring bus on the wrong side and there was a head-on crash. I must tell you something more. The brother of one of my nurses is the captain of 'The Swallow' and she was on the yacht. She saw your wife having dinner with Cardonald last night."

Tom looked up quickly and met the doctor's eyes. He was angry. He resented intensely this second suggestion. Cardonald meant nothing to her. "Why not?" he demanded bluntly. "There were other people on board."

"The crew, yes. Otherwise, as I told you, they were alone."

A nurse came into the room. "Mrs. Pallion's condition's changed a little," she said. "There is a quicker pulse."

"Oh? Then I must go up." The doctor went to the door. "I'll let you see the patient for a minute or two," he said. "Will you follow me?"

Feeling as though there were something red hot in his heart Tom followed with dragging feet. White walls; a white staircase with no carpet; Spartan simplicity and cleanliness; a lofty room with two windows; Judy, the lively and lovely Judy, still and deathlike on a white narrow bed.

"Oh, my God," said Tom.

"She spoke your name just now," said the doctor quietly. "Delirium—quite usual—talking in what is, you know, a sort of enforced sleep. She'll probably do so again. Take this chair, but you are not to touch the patient or raise your voice. I'm satisfied with the condition so far. It follows the normal course." He said something to the nurse beneath his breath. He went out, walking softly, and shut the door.

Tom sat, bending forward, holding on to his wrist.

The nurse did not know how to describe his expression except in medical terms. "Acute pain in the heart." She stood at the end of the bed, white, calm, steady, inwardly moved by more then her vocational sympathy for suffering human beings. Whatever the frailty of the patient her life must be preserved.

There was no movement of her body, no flicker of her long lashes, when Judy spoke again. It was a whisper, a clear even whisper, without any changes of inflection; a sort of chant.

"It's very nice here, Cardy. Such a wonderful view!"

In an immediate panic, Tom got to his feet. "I must get out," he said.

"Already? Why?"

"It's too frightfully unfair to stay and listen-in—to take advantage of her illness. . . ."

The nurse put her hand on his arm. "Never mind ethics," she said. "I most strongly advise you to stay. You love this girl, I can see, and whatever she did you will forgive. You will never ask her to tell you the story of last night and she won't ever say anything against a man who's dead. It may be your fault in some way and this may be your chance . . ."

The whisper came again and there was the faint suggestion of laughter in it which curdled Tom's blood.

"This yacht, your cottage, that amazing apartment in New York are rather dazzling, Cardy, I don't mind telling you. Then, too, you're a very good looking person and you do things well. They all make for fascination upon the average silly girl. Say what you like, the world is silly, because these brief passionate interludes mean almost nothing to you. You go from one to another without the slightest hurt. Oh, one knows all these stories. They're all flying about. But having dashed into this adventure without any thought and not being, to be brutally frank, in the least bit in love, I see now—I'm sorry, Cardy—what a silly fool I am . . . No, no. Eloquence won't work and you're requested not to touch the exhibits, or words to that effect. I hate to turn out a spoilsport, having gone so far, but you're going to treat me as though I were a wise old woman, a rather ugly aunt. Really, Cardy, that's true. We'll dine, and smoke, and talk, and listen to the gramophone, say good-night fairly early, meet again for breakfast—scrambled eggs for me—and then you'll drive me back. I apologize for misleading you and 'Thank you in advance,' as they say in business letters, 'for your charming consideration which I greatly appreciate . . .' I never knew until this moment, Cardy, how deeply I love Tom."

The chant continued for a moment but was too faint to understand.

The doctor came into the room. "That's all for today," he said.

Tom rose, bent over Judy and kissed her on the lips. He left on her cheeks something so grateful that it glistened like dew.

-SPIDERS-

The Ingenious Trapdoor Spider.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ALTHOUGH the mere mention of spiders to most laymen gives them the "creeps," the insect has been the subject of interesting scientific study by entomologists.

For the spider enthusiast sojourning in the country, whether in the United States or in any other land of temperate climate, the dawn of a late midsummer day in a marsh meadow holds promise of delight. It is spider season, the time when the fairy spinners are to be observed at their best, when small, dainty webs, usually overlooked, stand out in perfect design against the green of leaf and grass, the filmy silk glistening with dew.

Webs, webs everwhere—hundreds of them, thousands of them—billow a gossamer sea in the morning light!

There are funnel webs, sheet webs, hammock webs, webs of indescribable shapes, and, finest of all, near the edge of the woods, the beautiful orb webs, bejeweled in their radiant symmetry.

Spiders are marvelous spinners. From the many microscopic spigots at the tips of their heavy abdomens they conjure several kinds of silk with which to construct webs of exquisite design and beauty. They make snares for their prey, sacs for their eggs, shelters for protection from enemies, draglines for security in movement, balloons for navigating the skies, and many other things for service in their varied and romantic lives.

Although the silken webs are of many different design, the finery of the individual spider does not change with the passing seasons. Each species has its own style of web, to which all its members adhere so long as environment remains unaltered by geologic progress.

Evolution of the Web.

Students believe the first web, a simple tube, evolved from the draglines used by the spider in going in and out of a hole in the ground, its first retreat. These threads of silk finally lined the nest and radiated from the entrance. Striking against the lines, victims would be detected and seized by the watchful spider.

By extending the sheet about the entrance to the tube and bringing the latter out of the ground, the spider developed the funnel web. The axis of the web was shifted in the course of this change until the tube of the funnel became almost horizontal, and later the lower part was expanded into a net. These changes give us the typical funnel web, such as is spun by the common grass spider, Angelena naevia.

Inside the tube of the funnel, especially when this tube leads backward among tangled blades of grasses, the spider still has protection from its enemies. The placing of the web above the ground and the expansion of the lower part of it into a sheet increased its efficiency as an insect snare.

The tube, which leads away from the sheet part of a funnel web, becomes an inconvenience when webs are placed in exposed positions above the ground; hence the sheet-web weavers leave it out. By spinning the sheet in exposed positions, they are able to increase their catch of flying insects. Such closely-woven sheets, however, offer dangerous resistance to the wind.

Bowl and Dome Webs.

Spiders commonly modify sheet webs in two ways: They may bring the sides of the sheet upward to produce a hammock or bowl, or downward to form a dome.

The advantage of the bowl type is easily noted by observing our bowl and doily spider, Linyphia communis. It places its hammocklike web well below the tops of small shrubs or large herbaceous plants and directly under the favorite feeding places of such insects as plant lice and leaf hoppers. Naturally, every disturbance of the twigs and leaves shakes a shower of titbits into the snare.

The dome-shaped web is better suited for catching insects rising from the ground in flight, as many do about dusk or in the morning.

Irregular net webs, haphazard tangles of threads of all lengths, are spun by that annoyer of housewives in all temperate climates, the common house spider, and by many other species. Once considered primitive, such webs now are regarded as degenerate. They probably represent an evolution from the sheet type, altered to decrease resistance to the wind and to facilitate mending. As fly-traps, they are effective and, in addition, usually serve well for rearing the brood of spiderlings.

Like human fishermen, many spider species have found that a plane net of two dimensions is not only economical of weight and materials but ideal for landing a catch. The orb web, built on this principle, may be put in exposed places, where prey is most plentiful, since with its open construction it offers little resistance to the wind.

Suspended from a framework of stout base lines and carefully spaced to permit freedom of movement in spinning, its threads form a wheel like design of maximum strength with minimum of material. The spider sits at the hub, ready instantly to detect a snared victim and pounce upon it. In the net-snare method of catching prey the orb web is the spider's last word. Few, if any, other animals, human or subhuman, have equaled it.

Although tho most symmetrical web ever made by a spider is not really perfect, according to human standards, scientists marvel at the accuracy with which angles and distances are "measured."

Method of Construction.

The spider starts her geometrical web with perimeter lines connecting objects around a space large enough for her purpose. From these lines she suspends a few threads which converge at the center of the future web. Now begins the process of spacing the radii. She attaches the end of a new radius at the center and runs along a spoke already laid down, spinning out the silk for the new one as she goes. When she reaches the perimeter line, she takes a fixed number of steps along it and attaches the new thread. This process is repeated until all the desired radii are in place.

If the foundation lines should chance to form a wheel rim accurately circular, the distances between spokes would be equal; but, since the perimeter is usually an irregular quadrangle and never a circle, the spacing varies somewhat.

The spiral turns of silk, which complete the net, are more accurately spaced than the radii, since the spinner lays down each new turn with her foreleg touching the last one. Thus the length of the forelegs and the size of the spider determine these distances.

"Scout stepping" and the use of the "leg ruler" are instinctive in spiders. Even when isolated from its kind from the moment of its birth, a spiderling will produce exactly the same web design as its mother and in exactly the same manner.

Spiders constitute a large clan of some 25,000 described species. Although most abundant and diversified in the Tropics, they range far into the Arctic regions, and are found almost everywhere that earthly conditions will sustain life.

Far up on Mount Everest, above the highest plant life, at an elevation of 22,000 feet, spiders have been found living among the wind-and-snow-swept rocks. Thus they are the loftiest permanent inhabitants of the earth.

Some spiders, such as the trapdoor makers, occupy only a restricted area; while others, such as our common house spider, are found in many lands and all the continents.

The largest spiders are the American tarantulas, and of these the South American species, Theraphosa 'eblondi with a body 3½ inches long, is the giant. Its bulk is more than 100,000 times that of the smallest spider known.

In Central America is found its closest rival in size, Sericopelma communis. South America produces both the Brobdingnagians and the Lilliputians of spiders, one of the latter, Oguinius obtectus, being barely one-twenty-fifth of an inch in length.

SHOES MATCH GARB IN CUT AND COLOR

New shoes for 1934 match clothes in cut and color.

High-throated shoes appear as a smart accompaniment for the high-necked frocks, while oxfords which lace over the top of the foot with six or seven eyelets are shown as advance spring footwear to be worn with dresses which lace up the front.

Shoes which have flecked designs in several tones across the instep, suggesting the effect of flecked wools, are shown as a smart accessory to knitted or flecked wool sports frocks, and shoes covered with little diamond-shaped perforations are ready to be worn with high-necked frocks which have a diamond brooch flashing from the high neckline.

Softness in New Dresses Feature of Season's Mode

When one recalls the long and happy career of the Vionnet soft crepe afternoon dresses and the cry for more in similar genre it is not surprising that the stylists again recognize the possibilities latent in the soft crepe frock. The Vionnets were soft through cowls, scarf details and circular fullness, while these latest types have unpressed pleats and careless drapes. But it is a type of frock which stands out as entirely distinct from the tailored daytime frock.

Sports Attire

Knitted or crocheted frocks, coats, suits and hats are being chosen by fashionable women for sports wear, and suede suits with revers faced in hand-knitted wool to match the accompanying blouse are one of the smart sports novelties of the season.

WITH PEPLUM

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This very youthful-looking peplum frock is fashioned of olive green wool crepe, with brown velvet the trimming note. The peplum idea is being exploited for all it is worth this season.

New Zealand's Deers Are Cause of River Flooding

New Zealand's deer pest has become so great that the animals are blamed for the flooding of the Waimakariri river, which has caused heavy damage in parts of the country where no deer are seen. The River Trust, which controls the Waimakariri river watershed near Christchurch, has decided to stamp out the deer in the forests of the watershed. The animals have eaten vegetation until there is practically none to hold back melting snows or heavy rains, and the water rushes down the river in floods. Other campaigns to eliminate the pests have resulted in the killing of thousands of deer, but farmers still report heavy damage to crops by the animals.

Uruguay East of U. S.

Uruguay, where the Pan-American economic conference convened, is the smallest of the South American republics, being, roughly, about the size of Ohio and Indiana combined. Geographically, it is situated farther east than the United States, being due south of Newfoundland. Uruguay was first discovered in 1515 by the Spanish, but despite early efforts at colonization was not settled by Europeans until 1624. It passed through much warfare, both internal and external, but finally emerged as an independent republic in 1828. Its resources are largely agricultural, sheep, cattle and horses being raised extensively, while wheat, corn and flaxseed are also extensively raised. The capital, Montevideo, was colonized in 1726.

WORLD MOURNS PASSING OF KING ALBERT

The death of King Albert of Belgium, who was killed as the result of a fall while mountain climbing, will be sincerely mourned by his admirers all over the globe. King Albert has been described as one who was every inch a king and every inch a man.

In 1914, when the iron heel of war was stamped upon his almost defenceless country, King Albert, sharing the perils and suffering of his people, earned a lasting place in history for leadership in resistance to the German invasion so staunch and courageous that it won the sincere admiration of the world.

King Albert was a guest of the United States at one time, and to say that he was one of the most popular visitors ever received in this country is putting it mildly. American residents have ever since had a warm place in their hearts for the Belgian leader.

The world grieves with Belgium for a real man who died facing peril, as he often had during his life.

TEACHING FIRE SAFETY

Some time ago the Boy Scouts of America requested the National Board of Fire Underwriters to provide them with material on fire prevention with which to instruct their members. The result was a 65-page booklet entitled "Firemanship," for Merit Badge examinations. Over 60,000 Boy Scouts use it in preparing for tests each year.

It would be an excellent idea if a national program was started to acquaint children of all ages with the hazards of fire, and how to do away with them. Fire is a most serious problem. It touches every life, every piece of property. It menaces us all.

The schools have, in recent years, almost universally included accident prevention work in their curricula. They have instructed children in proper conduct on the streets and highways, in the home, at play—wherever carelessness or ignorance might cause an accident. The consequence has been a great reduction in the number of deaths and injuries among children of school age. The same thing could be done in the case of fire. It would be simple, inexpensive and enormously effective. In due course of time it would create a people who were congenitally awake to fire dangers and how to cope with them.

The story of an old-time Congressman who rode to Washington on a cow is being retold. And he probably shot her husband when he got there.

STEPHEN FOSTER

Some interesting sidelights on the life of Stephen Collins Foster, sweet singer of Southern songs, who never lived in the South, are given in a new book by John Tasker Howard, an authority on American music.

Foster was a native of Pittsburgh, where he spent most of his life, and it is said that he formed his taste for music through a negro girl servant in his home, who took him to colored revivals and early minstrel shows. Her influence is seen in his predilection for songs of the cabin and plantation.

When he wrote "Old Folks at Home," he had difficulty in finding a pleasing name of a Southern river to fit the meter of the first line. He first tried "Pedee," then "Yazoo," finally searching an Atlas until he found "Suwanee." The song was sold to Edwin P. Christy, a minstrel singer, for $15, under condition that Christy be allowed to pose as its author, and first editions of the song bore Christy's name.

Fosters' songs numbered about 125, for which he wrote both words and music, sometimes on wrapping paper, when nothing better was at hand. They earned for him about $15,000, but he was a ne'er-do-well and drank pretty heavily.

Stephen Foster's life might not have been considered much of a success by his contemporaries, but his matchless songs have won for him something akin to immortal fame.

GOODS NOT ORDERED

Considerable annoyance is often caused by the practice of certain firms which send goods by mail to persons who have not ordered them. Sometimes the goods are accompanied by stamps for their return in case the recipient does not desire to keep and pay for them. But the rewrapping and return of these packages is unnecessary, according to the National Better Business Bureau, which has obtained legal opinion on the subject.

"So long as unordered goods are not used by the recipient, he need neither return nor pay for them," says the Bureau. All that can be expected is that the recipient hold the goods ready to be returned in case a representative of the sender calls for them. And if they are not called for within a reasonable time, the recipient may have a claim for storage.

While no one would ordinarily desire to keep goods for which payment had not been made, the paying for unordered merchandise, or even its return to the sender, simply encourages the practice of trying to force goods upon the public. If everyone would follow the advice here given, the nuisance would be stopped in short order.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE

Although considerable attention was given to George Washington's birthplace during the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of his birth, in 1932, it is likely that if asked to name it, the average American would say Mount Vernon.

Our first President was born, however, at Wakefield, on Pope's Creek, some 50 miles below Mount Vernon, and the mansion in which he was born stood until it was burned on Christmas Eve, in 1780.

Washington moved to Mount Vernon, then called Hunting Creek, when he was about three years old. The original mansion at Mount Vernon burned in 1739, and the present one was erected shortly thereafter.

His birthplace, Wakefield, has long been marked by a granite shaft, erected by Congress, and a tract of 365 acres, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., donated 254 acres, has been set apart by the government as the George Washington Birthplace National Monument.

A new brick replica of the original mansion, one story with an attic, and with two outside brick chimneys at either end, was dedicated on Washington's birthday, 1932, with appropriate ceremonies.

LIQUOR CASES OUT

Some 13,000 persons under indictment for violating the Volstead Act were freed recently by a decision of the United States Supreme Court to the effect that no further convictions could be had under that law, which was repealed by the adoption of the twenty-first (Repeal) Amendment. The case upon which the court's decision was based came from North Carolina, where a Federal judge dismissed two men charged with a conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws. The Supreme Court upheld the district judge's ruling.

The decision was unanimous on the part of the members of the nation's highest court, the opinion being handed down by Chief Justice Hughes.

This decision does not affect the sentences of persons convicted and sentenced before the federal prohibition law was repealed, nor does it affect those charged with violation of state prohibition laws.

GOOD ROADS PAY

It has long been argued by good roads enthusiasts that the building of permanent highways is the one enterprise on earth that pays its own way. Some recent investigations by the American Automobile Association tend to confirm this idea.

In a recent report that association declares that good roads have reduced the average automobile operation cost from ten cents a mile to six and one-half cents in the last five years.

Besides the saving in gasoline, good roads make possible a great saving in time and wear and tear on cars and tires, at the same time providing comfort and safety.

HOW'S YOUR GEOGRAPHY?

Few of us know much about geography, except in a most vague way, and this being the case a little inquiry into the latitude and longitude of various places often reveals facts which are somewhat surprising, as a few examples may illustrate.

We think of "sunny Italy" as a warm, southern country, yet Rome and Chicago are in exactly the same latitude. Other pairs of places in equal latitude are Paris and Quebec; Berlin and Attu Island, Alaska; New York City and Istanbul (Constantinople); Florence, Italy, and Toronto, Canada. Venice, famed for its canals, is in the same latitude as Montreal.

In the matter of longitude, also, our casual impressions often might be found faulty. A classic example, pretty well known by this time, is that the Pacific end of the Panama Canal is farther east than the Atlantic end, owing to the peculiar curve of the isthmus.

Due to the eastward sweep of South America's western coast, we find Sanitago, Chile, to be 200 miles farther east than New York City. And Reno, Nevada, is farther west than Los Angeles. Washington, D. C., is due north of Nassau, Bahama Islands.

A good many persons, when they first heard of it, were surprised to learn that Tokyo, Japan, is some 1,100 miles farther east than Manila, Philippine Islands.

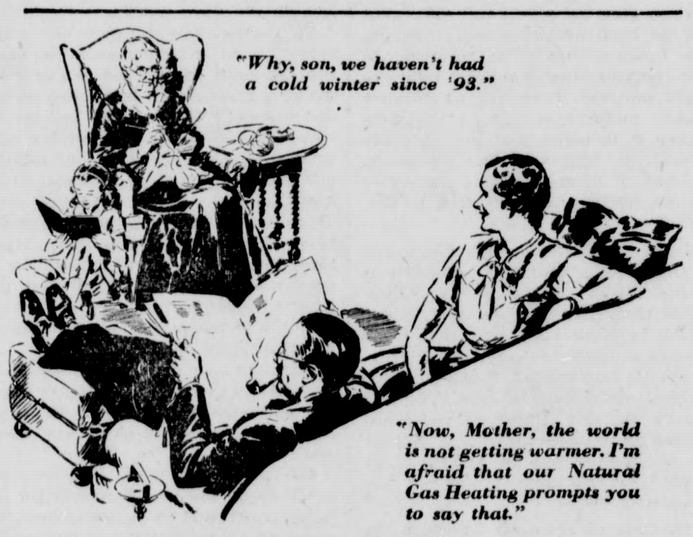
TOP-NOTCHERS IN FILMS

There is always a certain public interest in outstanding persons and things, whether they appear in the line of aviation, sports, motion pictures or what not. Catering to this interest, it is customary for persons or groups to select what they consider the top-notchers in various activities from time to time.

Accordingly, a poll of 12,000 exhibitors by a motion picture magazine discloses the following as the ten biggest money making stars of the screen during the last two years: Marie Dressler, Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Eddie Cantor, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, Mae West, Norma Shearer, and Joan Crawford.

The ten best pictures of 1933, selected by a group of 384 motion picture critics, as determined by another film magazine's annual poll, were listed as follows: Cavalcade, Forty-second Street, Private Life of Henry VIII, Lady for a Day, State Fair, Farewell to Arms, She Done Him Wrong, I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang, Maedchen in Uniform (German), and Rasputin and the Empress.

Perhaps without precedent in the annals of the stage has been the amazing "come-back" of Marie Dressler, who today, at the age of 60, is acclaimed as one of the most popular and highly paid actresses in the world.



"Why, son, we haven't had a cold winter since '93."
"Now, Mother, the world is not getting warmer. I'm afraid that our Natural Gas Heating prompts you to say that."

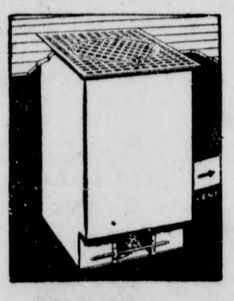
Natural Gas

Naturally THE BETTER FUEL

CALIFORNIA climate presents a heating problem that demands easily controlled heat.

There are no long severe winters. Heat is needed for short periods and it must come quickly. To build up a big fire means wasted fuel. For quick-acting heat that warms floors and walls and circulates into every room corner, climate-wise Californians, rely on Natural Gas—naturally the better fuel.

Gas is piped directly to the furnace or heater and there is no bother to order or handle it. Natural Gas Heating equipment, too, was developed for California homes. Each of the newest types of equipment have known heat-output ratings ranging from the smaller space heaters to the full automatic warm-air furnaces. Investigate and see. Get the facts.



Circulating Heater

Attractive, low in first cost and highly efficient. It heats two to four rooms. Made in many sizes and styles. Extremely economical to operate.

Floor Furnace

Solves the heating problem for homes without a basement. Highly praised by thousands. Saves floor space and is easy and most economical to install and operate.

JEWISH MAUSOLEUM GROUND BREAKING

The consecration and ground-breaking ceremony for the "Portals of Eternity," the Jewish mausoleum to be built by Congregation Sherith Israel, in the Hills of Eternity cemetery at Lawndale, took place last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

There was a musical program by Cantor Benjamin Liederman. The ground-breaking and consecration ceremony was directed by Adolfo Stahl, president of Temple Sherith Israel, George M. Lipman and Isadore Shemanski. Rabbi Morris Goldstein gave the spiritual interpretation. Other rabbis who participated include Elliot M. Burstein, Michael Fried and Irving Reivhert. Speakers were Governor Rolph, Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, City Administrator Alfred J. Celary and Harry K. Wolff, chairman of the day.

Pennsylvania Veterans Are to be Paid Bonus

Eugene C. Signarowitz, correspondent for the Forty and Eight Society of San Mateo County, has received the following information from La Graie Voiture of the Forty and Eight Society of the State of Pennsylvania:

"Recently the great old State of Pennsylvania passed a $50,000,000 bonus for its veterans. This bonus will be paid to all World War, Spanish American War, Boxer Rebellion, Phillippine and Guan Insurrection Veterans who gave their residence as that of Pennsylvania at the time of entry into the service. The act calls for the payment of $10.00 for each month in the service with a maximum of $200."

Nurses and yeomanettes are included in this bonus and if there are any veterans in San Mateo County who entered the service from Pennsylvania they are entitled to the bonus, stated Mr. Signarowitz, of San Mateo. Applications for the bonus are in the hands of Correspondent Signarowitz.

$50,000,000 For Schools From the C. W. A. Fund

Following a conference between U. S. Commissioner of Education Dr. George F. Zook and Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, the latter released $50,000,000 from the C. W. A. fund to permit more than 2,000,000 children to remain in school for the remainder of the term and to open other schools that were already closed.

This action was taken on the heels of a proposed amendment by Representative Ross A. Collins (D., Miss.), to seek $50,000,000 from the $950,000,000 relief bill now pending.

The funds are available only for salaries of certified teachers, for teaching the regular school work already under way this school year on and after the date upon which the school had been discontinued for lack of its own funds.

It was stated by Mr. Hopkins that these funds cannot be used for administration, supervision, clerical or janitorial services, or for maintenance, equipment or supplies.

This $50,000,000 complies with the first of six steps recommended that Congress should take by the conference of representatives of thirty-two national organizations which met in Washington, D. C., recently.

A CRACK AT A. A. A.

As the result of a decision by Federal Judge Akerman at Tampa, Florida, the constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment Act will be brought before the United States Supreme court. In action brought by a group of citrus raisers asking an injunction against federal interference with their crop production, Judge Akerman granted the injunction and declared the A. A. A. unconstitutional.

In a lengthy opinion, the judge took many a rap at the Department of Agriculture, which he said is engaged in "instructing the good farmers' wife how to hold diapers up on the baby and how to cut the little fellow's pants so that he could look after himself, without the aid of his mother."

Continuing, he asserts that "the Secretary of Agriculture has at his command an army bigger than Washington ever had; he has more power than Caesar ever had; he has more power than Nopoleon ever had; all without the authority of the constitution of the United States."

About two months ago Judge Akerman refused to enjoin a dry cleaner who had violated a N. R. A. price agreement, the judge holding that as the offender was not engaged in interstate business the Federal government could not interfere with him. The dry cleaner later voluntarily accepted Federal regulation, so that case was not taken to the highest court.

HIS WAY OF BORROWING

"What was you in jail for last summer, Sambo?"

"For borrowin' money, sah!"

"But they don't put people in jail for borrowing money, do they?"

"Dey do in some cases, boss. Now in dis case I had to knock the man down free or fo' times before he would lend it to me."

Demonstrates Modern Use of the Telephone

How "voiceless" conversations are carried over telephone wires, with no "Number, please?" or other spoken word was being explained recently in public demonstrations of exchange teletypewriter service, at 444 Bush Street, the business office of The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The demonstrations, scheduled to continue indefinitely, are being held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, duing the hours of 8:30 to 11:30 A. M., and 12:30 to 5:30 P. M., according to Lyle M. Brown, division manager of the Company.

Declaring these demonstrations of the new service essentially the same as those in the Bell System exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair, Brown today described their features, and the fundamentals of teletypewriter operation.

"The two display teletypewriters are actually connected by operators in San Francisco's new teletypewriter central office, as a means of illustrating methods followed in completing a regular call whether it be one mile or 3,000 miles," said Brown.

"Of all words, 'voiceless' is best to describe a teletypewriter central office, for the switchboard operators use paper tape instead of earphones, and keyboards for transmitters.

"Closely resembling a telephone switchboard, the central office equipment has cords, signal lights and other apparatus common to telephone central offices. All communication between operators, and between operators and subscribers, is done by teletypewriter.

There is a striking similarity in operation between the teletypewriter and the telephone. The telephone transmitter converts sound waves into electrical pulses which are changed back into sound waves by the receiver. The sending teletypewriter converts mechanical operations, corresponding to the telephone sound waves, into electrical pulses.

"These electrical pulses 'work' magnets in the connected teletypewriters and, through certain mechanisms, select the type bar of the desired letter and cause it to be printed. Spacing between letters is automatic," Brown continued.

"In general appearance the keyboard and striking mechanism or type bars of the teletypewriter carriage is electrically linked with its keyboard which is operated in the same manner as any typewriter keyboard."

NOTICE OF TRUSTEES' SALE

On Saturday, the 24th day of February, 1934, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., at the front entrance of the City Hall situated in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, H. A. Growth of Plants Speeded by Gas-Operated Hotbeds

Gas-operated hotbeds for flowers and vegetables are being tried out by the Pennsylvania State College, it is announced. Under a plan devised by the Central Pennsylvania Gas Company, water is heated in specially designed gas-filled boilers and circulated through the hotbeds in pipes laid about twelve inches below the surface of the soil. Thermostatic controls make it easy to obtain and maintain temperatures necessary for rapid growth of plants.

Queen Anne's Lace

SYNOPSIS

At a dance, a visitor in the community, Neal Conrad, young lawyer, is impressed by Anne Chamberlain, pretty daughter of a shiftless farmer, preceiving her fine character. A few days later she accompanies him and his hostess, Mrs. Griffin, on a picnic. At the end of the day Neal declares his love. At Washington, on their honeymoon, the Conrads meet Clarence Hathaway, friend of Neal's, young diplomat. The young couple start housekeeping. Anne's health begins to fail. Neal, engrossed in politics, does not notice. She realizes she is to be a mother. While Neal is away, Anne has a visit from an old friend, Mr. Goldenburg. In Neal's absence he takes charge of the situation. Neal is in an agony of remorse over his neglect. Their son is born. In the ensuing eight years Neal's law practice and his position in politics both mount. A daughter has been born to Anne, but her beauty is fading. Clarence Hathaway, now in a diplomatic post in Paris, visits the Conrads.

"I was thinking that I hadn't done as well politically as I'd hoped. I expected to be governor of this state by now."

"Well, yes. I rather thought that was your plan. But after all—"

Hathaway tapped the arm of his chair with his fingers, gazing into the open fire as he did so. Then he asked a most astonishing question.

"How about your wife? Was she interested in politics, too?"

"Anne?" Neal's surprise was apparent in his voice. "Why, Anne would be interested, I guess, in anything I wanted to do. She—she's devoted to me."

"Yes, of course, I saw that. But I mean—has she been helping you actively and directly as well as passively and indirectly?"

"She's gone without everything," Neal answered, coming swiftly to Anne's defense, under the impression that she was being attacked. "Good times, and pretty clothes, and trips and friends. I never would have been able to go into politics if she hadn't. Once I thought I was going to lose her—I'd neglected her terribly, and she was going to have a baby, which made it all the worse—and I nearly went wild when I realized what I'd done."

"But after you'd had a chance to forget about that bad time, you neglected her again?"

"I suppose I did—do. But—there's never been another woman."

"Good G—d! I should say not! What do you want—the Capitoline Venus?"

"No," roared Neal, angrily, "what are you driving at, anyway?"

"My dear fellow, please don't think I'm venturing to criticize your conduct. And as for criticizing your wife—well, I thought ten years ago she was one of the loveliest, as well as one of the most remarkable girls, I'd ever met in my life. I've remembered her, pretty vividly, all this time. That's a little unusual for me. And I confess that seeing her tonight has been an acute disappointment."

"Well, I'm not disappointed in her. She suits me."

"Just wait a minute, can't you? I still think she's beautiful—and remarkable. Even more remarkable than I'd guessed. But I think she's tragic."

"Tragic!"

"Yes. How old is she? Under thirty? I thought so. Well, she looks over forty. She's stagnating, mentally as well as physically. She's submerged herself in your personality, and your career and your children until she's nothing but a washed-out drudge without a particle of individuality left. She's done it voluntarily, because she loved you—loves you. But she must know, even if you don't know, that she was capable of something a good deal bigger. With her looks and her mind, and her natural gifts as a hostess—Neal, you utter fool."

"Even if you are my guest, and an old friend, I think you've gone about far enough in discussing my wife."

"Then suppose we discuss mine for a change."

"Yours! I didn't know you were married!"

"I'm not. But I was."

"You mean you lost her? Clare—I'm darned sorry, I hadn't heard—"

"Yes, I lost her. But she didn't die. She found out she cared for some one else more than she did for me. I found it out, too."

"Oh—"

"Yes. Exactly. She was a poor girl when I married her, almost as poor as Anne. And she came from a home that wasn't much better. But she was pretty, devilishly pretty and ambitious—for herself. I fell for her, hard—and fast. I ought to have known better— Lord knows I've had experience enough—but I married her. She began by almost ruining me financially, and she ended by almost ruining me diplomatically. Caesar's wife had a on that of a rising young secret . I left that post in Rome, which I enjoyed so much, because I was given an indefinite leave of absence. When I went to Paris, I went without her."

Neal found himself more moved than he could have imagined. And not only moved—enlightened. Clare—had made no comparisons—aloud. But Neal saw those that he had made mentally, as clearly as if they had been engraved in flaming letters. Saw, too, how he had injured Anne; and since he could, perhaps, never be entirely selfless, how he had, in injuring her, injured himself as well. Before he succeeded in framing an answer, Hathaway spoke again.

"So that's that. And seeing Anne—you don't mind if I call her Anne, do you?—here tonight brought it all back to me—because she's—she's so different. And you're so lucky—and playing against your luck!"

"What," Neal managed to ask "would you do, if you were I?"

Hathaway balanced the question "Would anything very dreadful happen," he asked at length, "if you left those two corking kids with that pretty maid—she'd look after them all right, wouldn't she?—and took Anne on a vacation? I'm sailing next week on the France—why don't you see if you could get a stateroom on the same boat? And—and spend the summer in Paris—and let me help give you both a good time!"

CHAPTER VIII

Neal had come down with a heavy cold which kept him confined to the hotel, but he insisted, since he was not really sick, and since there was so little time left, that Anne should not stay in with him, but should go, as they had both planned to do, and have tea with Clare at the Chateau de Madrid.

It was very warm for Paris, and Anne's beautifully dressed hair, shining like burnished gold, escaped from its net about the white nape of her neck and her white brow, and curled in little soft moist tendrils. Her diaphanous negligee, pale orchid color, had slipped away from one white, rounded shoulder, and she raised a slim white hand and pulled it into place.

"I shan't be disappointed," she said, "if I don't go. There are some letters I ought to write and—"

"Nonsense!"

"And I shall have to dress."

"Since when," teased Neal, "has that been a burden to you? . . . though I must say you look very nice the way you are."

She flushed, deliciously. "I meant—it is so very warm. . . . I suppose that Clare might think it unappreciative if we both went back on him."

She disappeared, into the bedroom, and a moment later Neal heard the sound of running water from the bathroom beyond. He smiled.

"Though I Must Say You Look Very Nice the Way You Are."

How happy she had been all summer! It was nearly four months now since they had stood beside the gangplank, watching it lifted, waving goodby to Dora and Junior and Nancy, to Mr. and Mrs. Goldenburg and George and Mabel, who had all come to see them off, for it was a great day for these old friends as well as for themselves when Neal and Anne actually "went to Europe."

The very morning after their arrival in Paris, while they were at breakfast, Clare, who had not left them until nearly midnight, reappeared, and mapped out their program. Before they did a single thing Anne must be reclothed. He would accompany them to a dressmaker's—a petite maison not too expensive but very recherchee, and worthy of being entrusted with this task.

"And I expect," he said frankly, "that the job will have to be done from the skin up. You don't look to me as if you had on the right things underneath. Nobody has waistlines any more; on the contrary, every one has legs."

"You don't expect me to go with Anne to the dressmaker's?" protested Neal, aghast.

"Of course. Both of us. Husband and interested friend. They'd think she didn't have any male relatives to pay the bills if she went alone."

And Clare was right about this as he was about everything else—Neal found himself welcomed with open arms. He enjoyed the welcome—at the first three or four establishments—then it began to pall on him, and he suggested that Clare and Anne should go without him, while he went around to the American Express to see if, by any chance, anyone from Belford had registered there. But he paid the bills without a murmur, in a glow of satisfaction, as he saw Anne transformed almost before his eyes. Presently she looked no more than her age again; then she began to look a good deal less than her age.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HOW NIMBLEHEELS GOT AWAY

PETER RABBIT was all a-shake. It was partly excitement, partly fear, and partly hope. You remember how he had gone back to the dear Old Brier Patch without a doubt in his mind that little Nimbleheels had been caught and carried away to the Green Forest by Hooty the Owl. You remember how sad Peter was and how he had sighed and sighed again, and how a thin, high, squeaky voice had asked if he was in pain.

That voice made Peter jump. It sounded exactly like the voice of little Nimbleheels. If Peter hadn't been absolutely sure that by this time Nimbleheels must be in the stomach of Hooty the Owl he would have said that this was the voice of Nimbleheels. But how could it be? It couldn't. His ears must have fooled him or else—"Who are you?" whispered Peter. "Are you a ghost?"

"I should say not!" exclaimed the same thin, high, squeaky voice indignantly. "There is no ghost about me! For goodness sake, what is the matter with you, Peter Rabbit?" Out in front of Peter hopped Nimbleheels.

Peter backed away hurriedly. "Go away," said he. "This isn't you. It can't be. You were caught by Hooty the Owl and carried away for his dinner. You can't be in his stomach and here, too, so this can't be you. Go away, please."

"Pinch yourself and wake up, Peter," squeaked Nimbleheels. Then he began to laugh with all his might. Peter frowned.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," said he rather crossly, for he still couldn't believe what his eyes saw.

Nimbleheels kept right on laughing until he was quite out of breath. "I may not be myself," said he, "but I'm quite sure I'm not anybody else. As for Hooty the Owl, if his stomach feels any fuller on my account I'm willing to make him the same kind of a meal every day. Go over and ask him. I'd like to know what he says. Just touch me, Peter. You'll find I'm real enough."

Very cautiously Peter reached out and touched Nimbleheels. Then his face cleared and he began to laugh himself. "I never was more sure of anything in all my life than I was that you had been caught and carried away by Hooty," said he when he could stop laughing long enough. "You asked what was the matter with me. I was sighing on your account, Nimbleheels. I was sighing because my heart was so sad at the thought that you had been killed and that I should never, never see you again. When you spoke I thought my ears must be playing tricks on me. I certainly did. How did you get away?"

"With the help of a friendly Black Shadow," replied Nimbleheels. "But for that I might be just where you thought I was. I was getting very tired, and two or three times Hooty almost caught me. Then just as I jumped that Black Shadow swept over us and Hooty couldn't see where I landed. I jumped twice more before the Black Shadow passed over, and by that time I was safe. Then I hurried over here to the dear Old Brier Patch to wait for you. You were very wise not to move when you sat out there in the moonlight, Peter Rabbit. I never could have sat like that right in plain sight. I never could have, possibly."

"That was nothing," replied Peter modestly. "I learned when I was very young that there are times to run and times to freeze and sit tight. This was one of those times. Tell me, Nimbleheels, doesn't such a long tail bother you?"

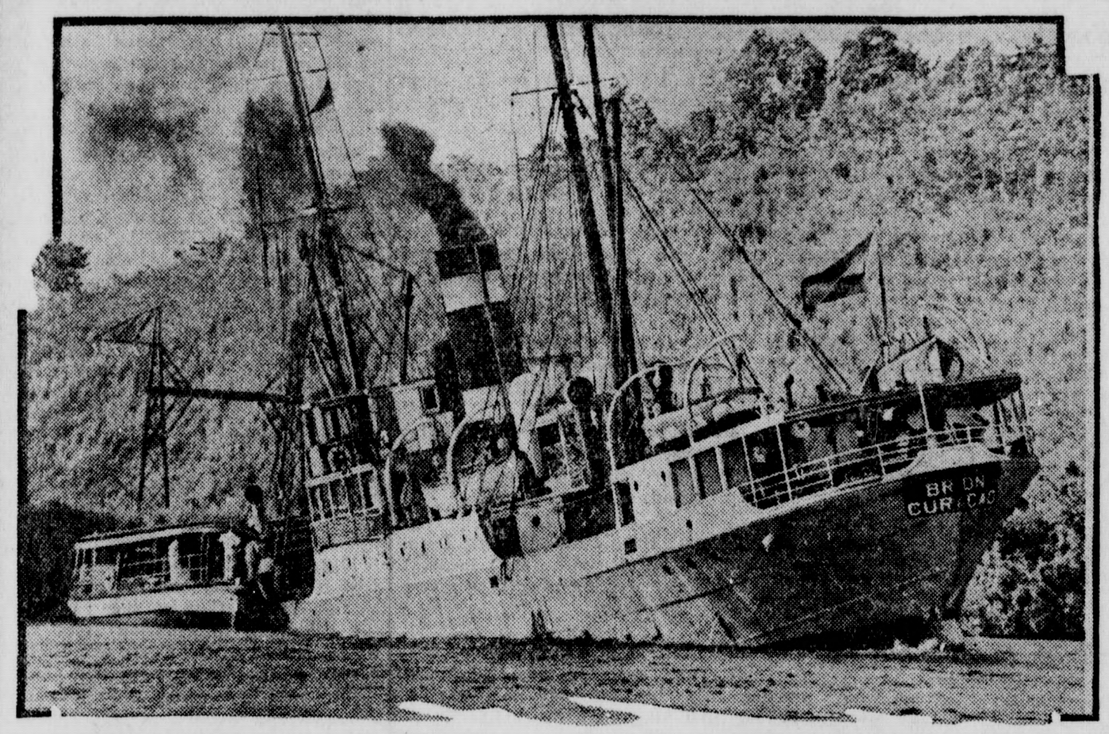
First Vessel to Founder in Panama Canal



THE Dutch freighter Brion has the distinction of being the first vessel to founder in the Panama canal. She went down in Gatun lake about half a mile south of the lock after having developed a dangerous list that led her commander to try to beach her. The crew was rescued by Panama canal launches.

STUFFED DATES

DO WE ever tire of the delectable dates? They are so good to serve with the afternoon tea, in salads, as desserts, as a confection, or stuffed with various fillings, one has an infinite variety and they are always welcome. The following are a few fillings for stuffed dates:

Orange Peanut.

To one-third of a cupful of peanut butter add slowly five tablespoonfuls of orange juice and one-half teaspoonful of grated orange rind. Fill the dates and roll them in chopped salted peanuts.

Apricot Coconut.

Wash one cupful of dried apricots. Steam over boiling water to soften, then run through a food chopper with one-half cupful of nut meats and two-thirds of a cupful of coconut. Add two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and one teaspoonful of orange rind. Mix until well blended. Stuff dates and roll in sugar.

Marshmallow Coconut.

Cut one-fourth pound of marshmallows into quarters with wet scissors. Stuff each date with a piece of marshmallow, placing the cut side up. Dip the sticky surface of the marshmallow into the shredded coconut.

Jumbo dates are prepared by pressing the edges of two dates together and stuffing as one.

Parisian Sweets.

Take one package of dates, one package of coconut, one-fourth pound each of figs and dried apricots, put through a food chopper. Add a tablespoonful of orange juice and a teaspoonful of the grated rind. Mix well and divide into parts. For fruit caramels pack the portion into small pans lightly oiled or buttered, crease into squares, and place a nut meat on each square. Chill, cut into cubes with a sharp knife that has been dipped into water.

Dried fruits may be used for fruit favors, turtles, animals; and various attractive things like ginger bread men may be made from figs, raisins, dates and nuts.

SOLDIER BOY!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SOLDIER Boy, are the days too long?
Is the sun too bright on your narrow walls?
Are you weary now of the robin's song,
And the wind's soft voice as the evening falls?
The lightest breath is too hard to bear
When a little life is so filled with care.
Soldier Boy, you are ten years old,
And your boyish soul has a cross to hold.

Soldier Boy, it's a bitter fight,
But your smile is valiant for those who come
Hoping to make your day more bright
With a gift to add to your meager sum.
You have a daily bout with pain,
And the years will drag till you run again.
With Health's quicksilver in your feet,
And a cry of joy for the friends you meet!

Soldier Boy, I would gladly give
My heart's firm beat and the strength of my hands,
If it would mean your right to live,
And scamper with joy on the summer sands.
Soldier Boy, it's an eagle's flight
To the lovely land where there is no night,
And the wings of your spirit are firm and true,
As onward and upward they carry you!

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By the Journalism Class)

After a short business meeting of the C. S. F. last Wednesday, a very interesting program was given consisting of essays written by Alma Harper and Walter Fati, English IV. students. Alma Harper is to have charge of the next meeting.

Last Friday afternoon Miss Edna Smith, commercial teacher, and approximately fifteen members of the "Joy Keys Klub," went on an inspection tour of the Eliott-Fischer Company to see the several machines demonstrated. Future trips to different business organizations are being planned.

Though the question of a Senior-Junior party is still being discussed, Robert Smith, senior president, has already chosen his committee for making preparations. The following are to serve: Philip Gibbons, Berta Ford, Jean Benner and George Rich.

Mrs. Willoughby, senior advisor, stated that if the majority of the seniors are not in favor of the Senior-Junior party plan, it will have to be dropped.

On Friday evening the Juniors held a roller skate at Iceland Rink. Meeting at the top of the hill at 6 gave the students plenty of time to get skates, as they seem to "run out" within an hour after the rink has opened.

Approximately sixty students attended and had a very enjoyable evening. A number of alumni joined the party.

KEEPING TO RIGHT PRIME SAFETY RULE

State law requires motorists to drive as close to the right hand edge of the roadway as practicable, except when overtaking another car or preparing to make a left turn. Failure to obey this law is a frequent cause of fatal and otherwise serious traffic accidents. These facts are being emphasized by the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association in a program of educational activities this month on the subject of keeping to the right.

Other related driving rules to which attention is being called by the state motorists' organization include the following:

Passing to the right of another car moving in the same direction on the open highway is a violation of the law. Such passing is permissible only on city streets wide enough for two lanes of traffic moving in each direction.

Motorists are required by law before changing from one lane to another, to first ascertain that they can do so in safety.

The law requires motorists to pull over to the right to allow an overtaking car to pass upon being signalled by the sound of a horn or other audible warning. Even though a motorist is traveling at the legal maximum of forty-five miles per hour he must give way to the overtaking car. Violators of this rule are commonly termed "road hogs."

On three-lane highways the car first to move into the center lane for the purpose of passing another car has the right of way, but must return to the right hand lane after passing.

The primary rule being stressed in the safety effort is that of keeping to the right as far as reasonably possible at all times. Failure to observe this rule, it is pointed out, largely offsets the margin of safety provided by wide, modern highways with their plainly marked traffic lanes.

VOTERS' LEAGUE WILL SPONSOR WHIST PARTY

The regular meeting of the Voters' League was held on Friday evening, February 16, with a large crowd present. Many new members were in attendance.

The final plans for the monster khist party was discussed. Date, Tuesday, March 13, City Auditorium. Mrs. Witt and Ed Cavagnero are in charge. Tickets can be had by enquiring of any member.

STABILITY

AMONG the many factors which contribute to the stability of Bank of America are the following: ¶ It is a statewide branch banking organization. Its far-flung geographical structure or "statewideness," makes for unusual stability through a widespread distribution of resources. ¶ Bank of America is conservatively and ably managed by far-visioned, long-experienced executives who fully realize their responsibility to over one million depositors and to the 248 communities in which the bank operates 415 branches.

civil war—the most dreadful kind of conflict.

Lincoln did all he could to hold the border states by moderate measures, and in this way he prevented the spread of the rebellion. He also ordered the blockade of the ports of the Confederate States. By this, the Confederates were unable to ship their cotton and receive supplies in exchange from the European nations. This blockading was a heavy blow to the Confederates.

Lincoln knew that in order to make his dreams come true, he must carry the people with him step by step, so on January 1, 1863, he issued his famous Proclamation of Emancipation which freed the slaves. The great leaders of the country doubted him when he was about to issue his Proclamation, but it proved that the people were with him. While the northern soldiers were battling on to victory, the voters at the polls showed that they admired the President, for he was re-elected by overwhelming majorities. On April 9, 1865, Lee surrendered at Appomattox, and, therefore, the war was over.

Now that his most serious worries were ended, it might be supposed that there would be better times for the famous President, but on April 14, 1865, when Lincoln went to Ford's theater in Washington to rest his body and mind, he was shot by an assassin. The next day Lincoln died.

The blow to the country was terrible, for men saw how great a man had fallen. Lincoln died a martyr to the cause to which he had given his life, and both life and death were heroic.

Abraham Lincoln

(By MURIEL WITTMER.)

Up to the present day, so many valuable and authentic books have been written, and so many eloquent speeches have been made by highly educated celebrities and statesmen, that it is difficult for a mere student to create a theme which would be justly fitting and proper for such a noble character.

Facts concerning the life of Lincoln are known by almost every American citizen. Even the youngest pupils attending our elementary schools are taught about Lincoln's early life in the backwoods, of his early hatred of slavery, and of his great love for the American people. And well they might! For what other man is so deeply enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen?

As the traits developed in Lincoln, the boy, formed the basis for many of the characteristics of Lincoln, the man, it may be well to mention a little of his early life.

He was born of exceedingly poor parents in the then backwoods state of Kentucky, and the advantages open to the son of an illiterate farmer were, of course, very slight.

He himself later admitted that his total school career was approximately twelve months' duration. We can easily conclude from this that he was a self taught man, and we can rightly marvel that such wonderful accomplishments were based on such a poor foundation.

Lincoln, from the age of eight to nineteen, lived the life experienced by almost every other boy of that time. His family always seemed to be in a rather unsettled state, moving about a great deal, and always looking for better farming lands.

At the age of twenty-one, young Lincoln was expected to make his own way in the world, and it was at this time that he made a trip to New Orleans, where he had his first close views of slavery. Its cruelty and horror made a lasting impression on him, and it was here that he first formed a very deep-roted hatred for the inhuman treatment of the negroes. Throughout his life he fought this evil until, at last, he saw his great cause won. The fact that Lincoln did dedicate so much of his time and effort to this issue, is probably the reason why his name shall forever be associated with slavery.

While still in his early manhoood, Lincoln studied law and decided to follow that profession. He proved to be very successful in this work, gaining, in the course of a few years, a great deal of fame and recognition for himself.

After serving in the Illinois state legislature, he was elected to congress for a single term, but his professional work constantly drew him from his political life.

After a series of debates with Stephen Douglas, Lincoln became one of the most prominent leaders in our country, and four years later he was nominated and elected president.

It was here, however, that his real trials began.

Lincoln's term came at a time when our country was in a most chaotic state, but he gave his unfailing efforts to save the Union and to keep it as our forefathers had intended it to be.

During the Civil War he was under a strain which few men could have endured, and yet he was always ready to hear one's individual problems and offer help wherever he could. His great repect and love of all people came, in his mind, above all other things.

He developed early in life a kind of shy reverence for women which he carried with him throughout his days.

At times his associates found it rather difficult to understand this man. His realization of the great responsibilities facing him during his presidential terms often made him rather morbid, so that he was, occasionally, rather hard to approach. Yet, in spite of this, he lived many happy moments, and his logical and humorous tales never failed to please.

Physically, however, we all know that Lincoln did have many shortcomings. His plain black clothes hanging loosely about his long-limbed figure, his voice, peculiarly high pitched, his thick, rather unkempt hair, the unbecoming lines in his face—all of these kept him from being what would commonly be called the perfect man. Yet people overlooked all of this, thinking only of his admirable character instead of his possible lack of perfect grooming.

Lincoln's death, which was caused by the gun of a crazed assassin, was a particularly tragic one, yet he is not remembered for this, but rather for his magnificent accomplishments during his life.

It has been said that the most admirable deed accomplished by the Civil War was the keeping of our country together. Abraham Lincoln did this as no other man could have. Yet, in doing so, he sought nothing for himself and lost none of his simplicity, patience and modesty.

MINING NOTES

G. C. Bateman, secretary of the Ontario Mining Association, one of Canada's leading authorities upon mining and monetary matters, says: "Return of the United States to Gold Bullion Standard, and the establishment of a price of $35 an ounce will have an important effect upon the gold mining industry of Canada by removing any element of uncertainty with regard to the future price of the metal."

The Vancouver Sun says: "Revaluation of gold at $35 an ounce, and removal of import restrictions by the United States is one of the most important developments in recent history. It means the addition of at least ten million dollars to the gold output of the Dominion, based upon last year's production of approximately three million ounces."

A strike of potentially rich ore has been made at the Cariboo Gold Quartz mine, according to a wire received from Fred M. Wells at the mine, by Dr. W. B. Burnett, president of the company. At the 1,500-foot level, 100 feet below the main level, several feet of gold bearing quartz has been encountered, while on the 1,200-foot level another vein has been struck showing several feet of ore.

The gold production of Ontario in 1932 was worth $48,000,000. And that was before gold came to be worth more than $20.67 an ounce. Now it is more than $34. Estimates set Ontario's gold production for 1933 at $60,000,000. Official figures are not yet available. Actual production in ounces was less than in 1932.

Articles of incorporation for the $500,000 Plumbago-El Dorado gold mines were filed with the secretary of state recently. The General Mining Company listed San Francisco as its headquarters.

British Columbia's coal output for 1933 was 1,252,975 tons, in comparison with 1,534,975 tons in 1932, according to returns issued by the Mines Department.

This House Has Natural Air Conditioning—a Cave

Decorah, Iowa, boasts a home which is air conditioned by cool air from a cave. While digging a basement for the house, workmen struck a small crevice in the rock and cold air immediately gushed forth. Since it showed signs of flowing indefinitely, the owner of the property forced a large tin pipe into the crevice to convey part of it into the house. The air maintains a constant temperature of 42 degrees, and not only keeps the place comfortable on warm days, but takes the place of a refrigerator.

TIRE RIM DEFECTS

Bent or flat spots on a tire rim may eventually damage the tire, according to the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Damaged rims should be replaced. Running on a flat tire or on a rim from which the tire has been removed frequently causes rim damage which cannot be properly repaired. Such rims are often the cause of blowouts. Rusty rims are injurious to tubes as well as casings. Rims should always be cleaned and checked for trueness before a new casing is installed.

At the Ortonville, Minn., harvest festival recently Mrs. L. W. Lindstrom, 71, won the women's corn-eating championship with a new women's record of 45 ears.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1934 NUMBER 31

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The pretty girl: "It must have taken a lot of courage to rescue me as you did."

Fireman: "Yeh. I had to knock down three other guys who wanted to do it."

Everything to build anything.

Future Admiral: "Say, what's the idea of wearing my raincoat?"

Roommate: "You wouldn't want your new suit to get wet, would you?"

He: "One night when you were away I heard a burglar, and you should have seen me going down-stairs three steps at a time, my dear."

Wife: "Where was he—on the roof?"

A Scotchman was strolling along the quay when his dog stopped beside a basketfull of lobsters, one of which snapped its claws on the dog's tail and the surprised collie dashed down the street, yelping.

The fishmonger bawled: "Mon, mon, whustle to yer dog! Whustle to yer dog."

"Hoot, mon," said the other, complacently, "whustle to your lobster."

To fill an unusual demand for our CALENDARS we were obliged to order a new lot. First call—First served.

We could stand superior people if they didn't insist on reminding us of their superiority.

The new monetary policy may put the gold brick artists out of business at last.

"Not many wake up and find themselves rich," states a writer. Except, perhaps, a professional boxer.

See Our Stuff.

We have a constitutional right to the pursuit of happiness, but no guarantee that we shall ever catch up with it.

We read of a young lady who "gave up her job in the soup works to study home economics." And she probably found it an effective measure of economy to eat plenty of soup.
